

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

In the schools of fifty years ago, the speller was one of the two or three books of prime importance. In the course of time a reaction followed; and not a few educators advocated a complete elimination of the spelling book. But of late the current has set in the old direction, and it is believed that most teachers now recognize the great utility of speller and word-book in the lower grades and in the rural schools. It is the aim of the publishers of the Rand-McNally Speller to furnish a book which shall meet all the requirements of teacher and pupil.

Of course, no attempt is made to include all the words the pupil will ever have occasion to spell; he will learn to spell very many of those he employs unconsciously and without the use of a speller. But it is the purpose of this book to start the pupil on the right track, to furnish him a considerable vocabulary, and to call special attention to the correct spelling of such words as are most commonly spelled incorrectly.

It will be noted that in Part I. much stress is laid upon correct pronunciation; this is as important as correct spelling. Part II. contains the few rules for spelling which experience has shown to be of value; and the importance of the use of these rules is strongly emphasized. In Part III. a very full list of homonyms is given; frequently these are among the most difficult words for the pupil to master. In Part IV. much space is devoted to the derivation of words from Latin and Greek roots, for it is believed that valuable results can be obtained by giving more prominence to such work than usually is the case with ordinary pupils in English. Each part contains also ample reviews and lists of difficult words.

The few dictation exercises are intended to be merely suggestive; the earnest and skillful teacher will devise many more, and in the writing of these exercises the teacher will insist upon good penmanship and correct punctuation, as well as correct spelling.

But little effort has been made to include a large number of scientific or geographical terms in this book. When the student has reached such a point in his education as to employ many such terms, he will have progressed beyond the use of a spelling book.

Much labor has been spent in the effort to make such a book as shall be most helpful to the teacher and most profitable to the pupil. It is believed that the work has been successfully done; and that the skillful and intelligent teachers of the country will find that it will be of greater assistance to them in obtaining the results they seek than any one hitherto published.

SUGGESTIONS TO TEACHERS.

- 1. In order to properly develop the plan of this book, teachers are urged to consider the reasons for the notes scattered through, and not to deviate from the directions without sufficient ground.
- 2. Since, with rare exceptions, pupils find no difficulty in spelling words in everyday use, the teacher should seek to discover the few words difficult for each individual child, and then drill on those until they are mastered.
- 3. Although many spelling books contain more rules than this one, we believe that this book includes all of practical value. The pupil should commit these to memory, and should be thoroughly drilled in their application.
- 4. The inflection of substantives and the conjugation of verbs are very fruitful sources of error in spelling. To these changes the rules frequently apply. Therefore the lessons which furnish drill in these respects should be dwelt upon.
- 5. For reasons stated in the text, unusual emphasis is laid on the spelling of derivatives from Latin and Greek roots. We suggest that the pupils be well drilled on these lessons in connection with their reading lessons.
- 6. Frequently the teacher should call for a sentence illustrating the meaning of a word spelled. "A bicycle has two wheels" is a much better sentence than "I have a bicycle," because the latter does not show a knowledge of bicycles on the pupil's part.
- 7. The pupil should be trained from the first to observe the spelling of a word when he first meets it.

FOR PENMANSHIP AND DICTATION.

The Philippine Islands form a great archipelago in the Paeifie Ocean southeast of China and east of the China Sea. Their number is variously estimated at from 500 to 2,000. They extend between 5 and 21 degrees north latitude and between 117 and 12b degrees east longitude from Greenwich. The area is estimated at 114,32b square miles and the population at 7,200,000.

FOR REFERENCE.

LETTERS.

Letters represent elementary sounds. Such sounds, properly united, make spoken words. Letters properly united make written words.

There are many varieties of letters used in printing and writing, as—Roman, Old English, Italic, Seript, etc., and each variety is used in two forms, known as CAPITALS and small letters.

If each sound used were represented by one letter, and each letter represented but one sound, our written language would be purely phonetic, and the spelling would be very simple. As it is, there are more sounds than letters. Some sounds are indicated by a single letter, some are indicated by a combination of letters. Sometimes several different sounds may be indicated by one letter, sometimes one sound by several different letters.

In many words adopted from foreign languages, with little or no change in spelling, are found exceptions to English rules of pronunciation. Many words contain silent letters. Many words cannot be classified, and the correct spelling of such must be learned separately. All these things add to the difficulty of English spelling and pronunciation.

The letters used in representing the sounds of the English language are twenty-six in number, and are on the following page.

VOWELS AND CONSONANTS.

Elementary sounds are of two kinds:

First, those which come from the open mouth, and are unobstructed by the position or action of the palate, tongue, teeth, or lips. These are termed vowel sounds, and are represented by letters called vowels. The vowels are: a, e, i, o, u, and y, the last representing some of the sounds of i.

Second, those which are mainly produced by the breath passing through a forced position of the palate, tongue, teeth, and lips, and usually in connection with a vowel sound. They are consonant sounds, and the letters representing them are called consonants. Sometimes they also are represented by combinations of consonant letters. The consonants are as follows: b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, w, x, z, and y, which is sometimes a vowel.

A vowel sound is a free, open sound of the voice.

Vowel sounds which may be prolonged indefinitely are called long vowels.

The short vowels should be uttered with a prompt, slightly explosive effort.

A consonant sound is a sound made by the obstructed voice or breath.

Whether a letter is a vowel or a consonant in any instance is determined by the sound it represents. Thus, i followed closely by another vowel, as in union, and y at the beginning of a syllable, as in yoke, are consonants.

A digraph is a combination of two vowels or of two consonants to represent a single sound, as ea in head and th in this.

A diphthong is a union of two vowels to represent one sound.

When both vowels are sounded, as in boil, the combination is called a proper diphthong. When it has the sound of one of its vowels, the other being silent, it is an improper diphthong; for instance, oa in boat, ai in sail, etc.

Three vowels may be united to indicate one vowel sound, as eau in beau, ieu in lieu.

A triphthong is the union of three vowel characters to represent a single sound.

The same letter may be employed to represent several different vowel sounds, as is shown by the use of a in the following words: fate, hat, far, all, ask, care, what.

Some consonants are used to represent different sounds, as c in cat and in cent, g in good and in gentle, etc.

The same vowel sound may be represented by different vowel characters, the same consonant sound by different consonant characters. For example: a in what is equivalent to o in not, e in prey to a in ape, c in cat to k in kindred, c in cell to s in sing, g in gem to j in jar, ph in phantom to f in felt.

WORDS.

A vowel, a diphthong, a triphthong, or any one of these united with one or more consonants, may be a syllable.

A syllable is a word, or part of a word, uttered by one impulse of the voice.

Words are composed of one or more syllables. The study of the form of words includes their spelling, their pronunciation, and their division into syllables. A person hearing a strange word learns its pronunciation but not its spelling, by the ear. If he desires to write the word, the best that he can do is to write it as he hears it; that is, to represent its sounds by the letters which seem to correspond to them. Thus, if the word is coughing, he might spell it kofing. He can not spell it correctly until he sees it in script or print, and observes the choice and order of its letters.

On the other hand, if he reads a strange word, he can not divide it into syllables, nor pronounce it, until he has heard it spoken, or seen it divided and its pronunciation indicated. Meeting the word coughing, not knowing its meaning, nor having heard it pronounced, he might divide it into syllables thus, co-ug-hing, or coug-hing. He would be in doubt as to how to pronounce the first syllable, for ough in English is sometimes pronounced ow, as in plough; oo, as in through; uff, as in enough, and off, as in cough.

A very important element in the pronunciation of a word is accent, which is a special stress of the voice, by which one syllable is made more prominent than the others. This can be determined only by the ear, or by some mark in a book of reference, like a speller or a dictionary.

Most persons learn the pronunciation of words by hearing them spoken, and the spelling by seeing them in print.

A further knowledge of words is acquired by eareful study, to assist in which this book has been prepared.

DIACRITICAL MARKING.

In ordinary written or printed words there is nothing to indicate the sounds represented by the letters, for each letter may denote several different sounds. Readers, in general, are presumed to have learned by observation what sounds letters represent in words in common use. It is for this reason that markings to indicate pronunciation are omitted from ordinary print.

To make easy the learning of the sounds which the letters in each word denote, the system of "diacritical marking" used by the authors of Webster's International Dictionary has been adopted for this book. This marking, by reference to the dictionary to ascertain the proper place of the accent and the proper sounds of the letters, enables one to pronounce correctly unfamiliar words in this book or in any other printed matter.

The diacritical marks, their names, and their uses are given in the following table:

TO THE TEACHER: This table is prepared, not to be committed to memory, but to be used at all times by the pupils for reference. Whenever, in their progress through the book, they are in doubt as to what any certain mark may indicate, this table will assist them.

There should be a drill upon the use of the table sufficient to familiarize the pupils with it.

A speller should teach correct pronunciation as well as correct orthography.

(See "Webster's International Dictionary.")

TO THE TEACHER: Encourage pupils when studying a lesson to look at each word carefully until its image remains in the mind; and when spelling a word, to call up the image and read the letters as they appear in it. Sometimes require the discritical marks and the crossing of the silent letters.

ACCENT.

Accent is stress or force of voice given to one syllable more than to others in the pronunciation of a word. The syllable which receives the stress is said to be accented.

In long words more than one syllable is accented. In such cases one syllable is accented more strongly than the others are. The stronger accent is called the primary accent. The weaker is called the secondary. Accent is indicated by a mark, thus: '.

The primary accent is distinguished by a heavier mark than that used for the secondary, thus: ad' van ta' geous.

SPELLER AND WORD-BOOK.

PART I.

LESSON 1.

THE MACRON (-)-THE BREVE (~).

The macron is a straight horizontal line placed over a vowel to indicate that the letter has its long sound; as, ā in hate. The long sound of a vowel is the sound made in speaking the name of the letter.

The breve is a mark placed over a vowel to indicate that the letter has its short sound; as, a in hat.

Key ā ă.

ā	ă	$ar{\mathbf{a}}$	ă
lake	bat	cage	sank
place	fad	cane	crash
same	tax	trade	plant
came	that	skate	\mathbf{camp}
mace	\mathbf{map}	${f slake}$	stamp

Note.—An e at the end of a word generally indicates no sound—that is, it is a sin rate.

TO THE TEACHER: Select one or more paragraphs in the reader from which pupils are to copy ten words containing long or short sounds of the key letter of the lesson, marking that letter in each word.

The request on page 15, to cross silent letters, applies only to such letters as pupils may perceive to be silent. At this stage they will not know invariably whether a given letter is silent or not.

LESSON 2.

Key ē ĕ.

ē	ĕ	ē	ĕ
eve	\mathbf{let}	\mathbf{seek}	left
scene	yet	neat	zest
mete	${f rent}$	\mathbf{knee}	best
mere	\mathbf{chest}	yeast	deaf
these	\mathbf{dense}	\mathbf{dream}	fence
\mathbf{theme}	\mathbf{wedge}	squeak	sweat

TO THE PUPIL: Can you write each of these words correctly, and tell what it means? Use the words of each lesson in short sentences, oral or written.

LESSON 3.

Key ā ă, ē ĕ.

DICTATION.

Haste makes waste.

Better late than never.

Planets reflect light.

TO THE TEACHER: Require pupils to copy the sentences, to mark the letters in each word according to the key, and to spell the indicated words and give their meanings as they are used. These directions apply to all dictation exercises.

LESSON 4.

Key ī ĭ.

shine	\mathbf{width}	knife	rinse
\mathbf{slime}	\mathbf{mince}	a bide'	\mathbf{squint}

Find in your reading lesson five words containing the sound I; also five containing the sound I.

LESSON 5.

Key ā ă, ē ĕ, ī ĭ.

DICTATION.

Economize your resources.

Be patient and polite.

Find words having the key sounds in your reading lesson.

¹Also pronounced shone.

²Also spelled blonde.

LESSON 7.

Key ā ă, ē ĕ, ī ĭ, ō ŏ.
DICTATION.

Contentment is wealth.

Live not for thyself alone.

Too low they build who build beneath the stars.

LESSON 8.

U=ēo. Sound distinctly ē, then o as in the word do. Now practice sounding them closer together until the two sounds blend. This blended sound is the sound of long u.

Key ū ŭ.
ū	ŭ	ū	ŭ
yule	gull	\mathbf{u}' \mathbf{nit}	\mathbf{shut}

mute	\mathbf{dumb}	$\mathbf{m}\mathbf{u}'\mathbf{sic}$	rud' dy
plume	\mathbf{thrust}	$\mathbf{tu'}\ \mathbf{mor}$	tuft' ed

Find words in your reader having the key sounds.

TO THE TEACHER: Special drill is needed upon the long u. Its sound at the beginning of a word is that of the word you. Through carelessness, many errors in the pronunciation of words with u occur. Thus, plume is often called ploom.

LESSON 9.

Key ā ă, ē ĕ, ī ĭ, ō ŏ, ū ŭ.
DICTATION.

Think before you speak.

Cuba and Puerto Rieo are islands in the West Indies.

LESSON 10.

In the Italian language the regular sound of a is as we give it in ah. That sound in the English language is indicated by two dots placed over it, thus—ä. It is called Italian a.

The sound of a in ask (marked a) so nearly resembles Italian a shortened that it may be properly called short Italian a.

To sound it give the syllable ah, slightly shortened. Do not mistake à for ŏ.

Key ä å.

ä	å	ä	å
tart	\mathbf{daft}	star	lath
scar	bass	taunt	fast
calm	gasp	jaunt	a las'
aunt	clasp	daunt	mask
park	$\overline{\text{trance}}$	\mathbf{wrath}	\mathbf{aft}' er
stark	\mathbf{chance}	launch	pas' ture
laugh	blanch	saun' ter	en hance'
psalm	pas' time	har' vest	pass' port

To the Teacher: It is quite common to pronounce words like aunt, laugh, gasp, lath, as though the a were like a or a. Give special attention to the correction of this fault. Drill upon the sounds of a so far indicated—a, a, a, a.

As an occasional exercise, dictate the words of the lesson, changing their order, for pupils to write; then require them to mark the words as they understand them to be pronounced, without referring to the book.

LESSON 11.

GENERAL EXERCISE.

Drill on Italian Sounds of a.

TO THE TEACHER: The following lists are prepared as a general exercise for practice on the Italian sounds of a. They can be used in oral drill, books in hand, or as an exercise in word-marking from dictation. In oral drill, your enunciation must be the model. In dictation, break the order of the word lists.

Italian.

Äh, härm, bälm, läugh, pälm, lärch, ärm, häunt, chärm, gäunt, heärt, Märch, hälf, pärlor, stärch, bärge, jär, härt, cärve, psälm.

Short Italian.

Task, cast, staff, pant, craft, lass, bath, ask, vast, mass, chant, pass, advance, after, ant, bask, blast, branch, chaff, chance, class, raft, lance, waft, cask brass, America, Africa, Canada, Carolina, Havana, Montana, China, Emma, Ella, Ida, Clara, Eliza, banana, soda, sofa, comma, idea, algebra, dance, delta, dogma, boa, coma, pupa.

Both Sounds.

Wräth, säunter, älms, gråsp, flåsk, påsture, älmond, alärm, sälve, cälf, påssover, bäth, shåft, trånce, quåff, Chärles, lärch, plåster, prånce, glånce, czär, båsket, låst, ålås, gäpe, bärge, slånt, lävå, åbåft, ärch, påstor, häunch, dånce, måster, åmåss, färce, stärve, måstiff, Frånce, sopräno.

LESSON 12.

The sound of a in such words as air and care is indicated by a circumflex; thus, a.

The broad sound of a is that which the letter represents in the words call and salt. This sound is indicated by two dots placed under the a, thus, a.

Key â a.
A	8	â	a
chair	talk	dare	chalk
scare	\mathbf{claw}	\mathbf{mare}	\mathbf{dwarf}
share	\mathbf{maul}	\mathbf{spare}	\mathbf{sward}
snare	warm	${f glare}$	fal' ter
fair'y	sauce	prayer	fall' en
de spair'	waltz	par' ents	draw' ing

Write and mark ten words containing the sound a; also ten words containing the sound a. By crossing out the silent letters in the words written, you will realize more fully the power of those that remain.

Do you not learn from this lesson that you have been habitually mispronouncing some common words? For instance, have you been saying parents for parents, sass for sauce, and chok for chalk? It is as grave a fault to mispronounce as it is to misspell.

It is nice discrimination in the use of these shades of sound which, more than anything else, marks the conversation of people of culture.

To the Pupil: If you are not certain as to the pronunciation of the words you select, consult the dictionary.

LESSON 13.

The sound of a, as in senate, is its modified long sound. It is indicated by the modified macron, thus, a.

LESSON 14.

E occurring before r is generally sounded as e in fern, and is marked thus, $\tilde{\mathbf{e}}$. The mark is called the tilde.

E, as in the first letter of event, has the modified long sound of the letter, and is marked thus, E. The mark is called the modified macron.

Write and mark ten words containing these sounds of e.

Note.— \mathbf{e} , like \mathbf{a} , is sometimes used with an extremely obscure sound, as in novel, prudence.

As has been shown, the letter e represents sounds as follows: ē or ē, ĕ, ĕ.

TO THE TEACHER: Drill your pupils in giving these sounds. Much careful practice is necessary to secure good pronunciation. Be sure that pupils open their mouths sufficiently in giving the vowel sounds.

LESSON 15.

I, in idea, has the modified long sound of the letter, and is marked thus, i.

Key i.

i de' al	$\mathbf{bi}\ \mathbf{sect'}$	i rate'	Chi nese'1

As has been shown, the letter i represents sounds as follows: ī or ī, ĭ, ĩ.

LESSON 16.

O, as in obey, has its modified long sound, which is indicated thus, 5.

O, as in corn, is marked with a circumflex: thus, ô.

Key ō ô.

LESSON 17.

GENERAL EXERCISE.

For Drill in the Sound of ŏ.

Many of these words are commonly mispronounced. Avoid giving the broad sound of a (a) for the short sound of o (o).

cost	\mathbf{broth}	${f throng}$	$\mathbf{of'}\ \mathbf{fer}$

Have you not been saying cawst for cost; mawk for mock; awf ten for often?

LESSON 18.

ravage	parents	delicate	gorgeous

LESSON 19.

The sound of oo, as in ooze, is long, and is marked with the macron, thus, $ooldsymbol{oo}$.

The sound of oo, as in foot, is short, and is marked with the breve, thus, ŏo.

Key oo oo.

 	ŏŏ	oo	ŏŏ
coo	cook	pool	soot
loop	rook	boot	took
root	good	hoof	hook

Have you been in the habit of saying roof for roof, root for root, tooth for tooth, cooper for cooper, or soon for soon?

Write twenty words, ten containing \overline{oo} , and ten \overline{oo} .

LESSON 20.

U as in rude is marked thus, u. U as in put is marked thus, u.

Кеу џ џ.

Ų	Ų	ņ	Ų
ruse	ful fill'	ru' by	bul' let prude	$\mathbf{pul'ley}$	ru' ral	pul' let prune	bush'el	rul' er	$\mathbf{pul'}\mathbf{pit}$

in trude'	$\mathbf{pud}'\mathbf{ding}$	tru'ant	put' ting

LESSON 21.

U as in urn is marked thus, û. U as in unite has the modified long sound of the letter, and is marked thus, û.

Key û û.

		· J
û	ά	û	ù
furl	is' sue	$\operatorname{\mathbf{gur}}'\operatorname{\mathbf{gle}}$	fix' ture
purr	na' ture	sur' plus	$\mathbf{ver'}\mathbf{dure}$
urge	lei' sure	fur' nace	hu mane'
hurt	${f ref'uge}$	$\mathbf{mur'mur}$	meas' ure
burn	\mathbf{mix}' \mathbf{ture}	$\operatorname{pur}'\operatorname{chase}$	su preme'

To the Teacher: The various sounds of u have now been given, as follows: .1 ŭ, u, u, û û. Drill the class in sounding u as indicated by these six markings.

LESSON 22.

Diphthongs.

Oi, oy, as in toil and boy, and ou, ow, as in rout and howl, are proper diphthongs.

In these the vowel sounds blend and the letters are not marked.

oi or oy	oi or oy	ou or ow	ou or ow
joy	re coil'	rouse	owl
troy	an noy'	\mathbf{growl}	\mathbf{doubt}
poise	${f re}\ {f join'}$	bound	scowl
quoit	em ploy'	\mathbf{browse}	ounce

Write twenty words, each containing a proper diphthong.

LESSON 23.

In improper diphthongs but one vowel is sounded, the other being silent; ai, ea, oa are examples.

$ai = \bar{a}$ and \hat{a}	$\mathbf{ea} = \mathbf{\bar{a}} \text{ and } \mathbf{\ddot{a}}$	$\mathbf{oa} = \mathbf{\bar{o}}$
lair	break	goal
train	hearth	shoal
braise	heart' v	foam

Copy the words, marking the active vowel of each diphthong and canceling the silent one.

TO THE TEACHER: Lesson 23 is given simply to indicate the use of improper diphthongs. Many mistakes in spelling result from failure to select the right diphthong out of several which represent the same sound in spelling a given syllable. Extensive practice in the use of diphthongs is necessary.

LESSON 24.

WORDS OFTEN MISPRONOUNCED.

For Drill in the Sounds of u.

In the following group the sound of u, in words beginning with that letter, is like the word you; as, yous age, usage. In the other words a slight sound of ē precedes the u.

pure	u' ni son	\mathbf{cube}	\mathbf{mule}
pu' ny	$\mathbf{b}\mathbf{u}'\mathbf{g}\mathbf{l}\mathbf{e}$	$\mathbf{tu'}\mathbf{mult}$	u' ni ty
us' age	$\mathbf{fu}'\mathbf{tile}$	pu' pil	u' ni form

If the u follows d, j, t, l, n, s, or th, as in the following words, its sound is like $\bar{\mathbf{e}}\mathbf{o}$, but long e is very brief.

Do not say tyoon or toon for tune; dyoop, syoot, lyoot, for dupe, suit, lute. The correct pronunciation is midway between these extremes. The word suet may test your skill in sound-giving.

suit	flute	flu' id	lure tube	${f nude}$	$\mathbf{su'}\mathbf{et}$	$\mathbf{d}\mathbf{u}'\mathbf{t}\mathbf{y}$
sue	ju' ry	en sue'	tu' lip

In a few words c has the sound of z. Examples: Suffice, sacrifice, discern.

LESSON 26.

Ch has three sounds: As in catch, unmarked ch; like k, as in chaos, marked ch (hard); like sh, as in charade, marked ch (soft).

Key ch eh ch.

TO THE TEACHER: In the lessons on consonant sounds, pupils should be required to define or to illustrate the meaning of every word, to copy and mark each according to the key, and to cross out silent letters; also to write from ten to twenty words containing the key sounds.

LESSON 27.

G has two regular sounds. It is like j, as in gem, marked ġ (soft); and it is as in gull, marked ġ (hard).

To the Teacher: Oral spelling is a valuable exercise and should not be neglected. Recently it has been neglected because it is said, and truly, that the only practical use we make of spelling is in writing. While this is true we get a very much clearer and more complete concept of a word when we know its look and its sound also. In dictating words for oral spelling, no word should be pronounced more than once, nor should a pupil be allowed to make a second trial. It should be an exercise in training the class to hear correctly and to think correctly the first time. It is no place for guessing.

PART II.

ORIGIN OF WORDS AND THEIR CLASSIFICATION.

According to their form and origin, words are of three classes, viz.: Primitive, Derivative, and Compound.

A primitive word is one not derived from any other in the same language; as, home, form, etc. Such words constitute the original stock of the mother tongue. Besides the primitive words belonging to the language, the English has many words that have been transferred to it from time to time, from almost every language, ancient and modern. The changes of primitive words, to show number and case in substantives, mode, tense, and agreement in verbs, and comparison in adjectives and adverbs, give occasion for many of the most common mistakes in spelling. Hence, primitive words need careful attention.

A derivative word is one formed by adding to a root-word a prefix or a suffix, or both, to modify its meaning. Examples: reform, harmless, farmer.

A prefix is a letter or one or more syllables united with the beginning of a word to modify its meaning. Examples: pre in *pre*fix, con in *con*form, in in in form.

A suffix is a letter or one or more syllables united to the end of a word to modify its meaning. Examples: less in heartless, hood in childhood, ness in goodness.

The root of a derivative is the part to which the prefixes or suffixes are added. Examples: fix in prefix, child in childhood.

A compound word is one formed by joining two or more words together to express one idea. Examples: school and house, schoolhouse; ill and natured, ill-natured.

Many derivatives are formed by joining prefixes and suffixes to English root-words; but a very large number are made from Latin and Greek root-words. We shall study these in Part IV.

The parts of a compound word are usually joined by a hyphen at first; but as the word is used more and more, the tendency is to omit the hyphen. Hence, there are many words in which some good writers would use a hyphen, while others would not. Other words imperatively require the hyphen.

A Syllable is a single vowel or collection of letters pronounced by one impulse of the voice.

According to the number of syllables they contain, words are classified as Monosyllables, Dissyllables, Trisyllables, and Polysyllables.

A Monosyllable is a word of one syllable; as, part, home, large.

A Dissyllable is a word of two syllables; as, part-ner, home-less, larg-er.

A Trisyllable is a word of three syllables; as part-ner-ship, awk-ward-ness.

A Polysyllable is a word of more than three syllables; as, co-part-ner-ship, in-de-struct-i-bil-i-ty.

A syllable must not be divided at the end of a line.

LESSON 1.

Forming Compound Words.

Join the following words together in such a way as to make as many compounds as you can. Examples: fox and glove, foxglove; door and way, doorway.

tin	${f side}$	\mathbf{set}	bill	man

LESSON 5.

A change of accent often changes the meaning of words. Pronounce the following words, accenting the first syllable, and notice that each when so accented is a noun. Pronounce them again, accenting the second syllable, and notice that they have now become verbs:

ob ject	es cort	con voy	in sult
ac cent	con vict	sur vey	pre fix
con test	con vert	fer ment	per mit
tor ment	pre lude	in crease	con flict
con trast	con tract	ab stract	per vert
con verse	com pound	per fume	con duct

There are many words that may be used either as nouns or adjectives or verbs without change of accent; as, whis per, com plete, pa trol, perfect, pol ish, fin ish, etc.

LESSON 6.

The first word of each pair is a noun or adjective; the second a verb:

RULES FOR SPELLING.

I. Words ending in e, preceded by a consonant, drop the e on taking a suffix beginning with a vowel. There are a few exceptions, as in singeing, where the e is retained to insure the soft sound of the g; e is also retained after c before suffixes beginning with a or o.

Notz.—e final is dropped in derivatives from awe, argue, judge, lodge, acknowledge, woe, abridge, due, and true.

II. Monosyllables and words accented on the last syllable, ending in a single consonant preceded by a single short vowel, double the final consonant on taking a suffix beginning with a vowel. The plural of gas is an exception.

h, j, q, w, and x are never doubled.

Many writers double the final consonant in words of more than one syllable, even when the final syllable is not accented, as in traveller, worshipper, levelling, etc. Most of the dictionaries give authority for this, but there seems to be no good reason for it.

III. Words ending in y, preceded by a consonant, change the y to i on taking a suffix. If the suffix begins with i the y is retained, as in copyist. Derivations from adjectives of one syllable usually retain the final y, as sly, slyly; dry, dryness, etc.

Note.—Failure to observe these rules, in making the changes required by grammatical forms and in the derivation of words from English roots, is probably the most fruitful source of bad orthography. Hence, we often see such misspelling as smokeing, beginning, pityful, etc.

Several other rules for spelling are sometimes given, but they seem to be of little or no value. These three are very important, and should be committed to memory.

LESSON 40.

Words derived from the primitive word act:

	am a a+/		4/
re act'	$\mathbf{en} \ \mathbf{act'}$	$\mathbf{re} \ \mathbf{act'ed}$	re en act'

PART III.

HOMONYMS.

In our language many words of various meanings, because built from different roots, are pronounced alike or nearly alike. These are called homonyms. The following lessons contain a very complete list of these words. Each is followed by a synonym, or by a phrase indicating its meaning; enough is given to distinguish the words, but no attempt is made to present complete definitions, or to indicate all the various meanings of the words.

TO THE TEACHER: The pupil should learn to spell these homonyms, and to distinguish carefully their meanings; and he should be required to construct a great number of sentences in which they are properly used. SYNONYMS.

Synonyms are words which are much alike in general meaning, but which often exhibit marked differences when we attempt to apply them.

To the Teacher: Impress pupils with the fact that our language is rich in words both for general and specific use; that there is need for discrimination when using them; and that precise and elegant expression is one of the definite results that come from word study. Lead them to see that there is always a clear, concise way of expressing a thought, in which every word fits its place and exactly expresses the meaning intended to be conveyed. Also, that the more careful they are to select their words, the clearer and more forcible will be their speech.

Lead them to seek for the essential meaning of words; to question their use in dictation work and reading exercises; and to try to give good examples of their use.

As we know words, so will be our ability to use them. The primary object of word study in advanced work is the ability to use words well. Spelling is incidental.

Be sure that your pupils understand that true synonyms—i. e., words which mean the same thing—are very rare in English; that words usually classed as synonyms must not be indiscriminately used, one for another; that they are only partially equivalent, expressing certain shades of meaning in common.

Which word denotes a greater degree of age, a'ged or old? Which is the more orderly, to has'ten or hur'ry? Do people live or dwell in one place? How do the words mix and blend differ in meaning? Do superiors or equals par'don? Which ex cuse'? Which is done through good nature? Which from mercy or generosity?

TO THE PUPIL: Select those words in the list that mean the same or nearly the same, and arrange them in pairs. Note the distinctions, and use the words in sentences.

IMPORTANT DISTINCTIONS.

All words are either Primitive or Derivative.

A Primitive word is not derived from a simpler word in the language.

A Derivative word is formed from a simpler word by prefixing or affixing a syllable.

A Prefix is a syllable placed before or at the beginning of a word to change its meaning.

A Suffix is a syllable added to or placed after a word to change its meaning.

FIVE RULES FOR SPELLING.

[The following rules have few or no exceptions, and may, therefore, aid the learner.]

RULE I. Verbs of one syllable ending with a single consonant preceded by a single vowel, and verbs of two or more syllables ending in the same manner and having the accent on the last syllable, double the final consonant whenever another syllable is added; as, get, get' ting; o mit', o mit' ted.

RULE II. The plural of nouns ending in y when y is preceded by a consonant, is formed by changing y into i and adding es; as, lil'y, lil'ies. When y final is preceded by a vowel the plural is formed by adding s; as, val' ley, val' leys.

RULE III. Nouns ending in o preceded by another vowel form their plurals regularly by adding s to the singular; as, cam' e o, cam' e os.

RULE IV. Words formed by prefixing one or more syllables to words ending in a double consonant retain both consonants; as, be fall', re buff'. The exceptions are, with al', an nul', dis til', in stil', ful fil', un til'.

RULE V. The word full used as an affix always drops one l, and its compounds thus formed make their plurals regularly by adding s to the singular; as, hand'ful, hand'fuls; spoon'ful, spoon'fuls.

PART IV.

LATIN AND GREEK ROOTS—PREFIXES AND SUFFIXES.

Formation of English Words.

A very large number of English words are formed from Latin and Greek roots. Usually these words are formed by joining one or more prefixes or suffixes, or both, to some form of a root word, as pre=before and fix=to place or to put—prefix=to put before; ir (in)=not, re=again, spons=answer, ible=able—irresponsible=not able, or held to answer again.

But sometimes two roots are joined together, as manu=the hand, and script = written — manuscript=written with the hand.

Sometimes the meanings of the parts of a derivative word are easily traceable, but sometimes the word has lost its original or literal signification. For example, prevent, which comes from the Latin ven=go and prae=before, originally meant to go before, but has now come to signify to hinder.

All the words derived from a common root may be thought of as constituting a family; thus they are more easily associated, and their spelling and meaning more easily remembered.

On the following pages will be found lists of prefixes and suffixes with their most common meanings; these should be carefully studied, and those most used should be memorized. Use these lists for reference.

Euphony is the pleasing or easy succession of vowel or consonant sounds. For the sake of euphony, many prefixes change their forms before different letters. For example, the first forms of the Latin prefixes meaning to, against, and in are ad, ob, and in; but it is easier to say accord than adcord, attract than adtract, allude than adlude, oppose than obpose, occur than obcur, illustrate than inlustrate, impiety than inpiety. Therefore, instead of ad, ob, in, and the first forms of other prefixes, we may have ac, al, oc, il, etc., according to the laws of euphony.

In the following lessons no attempt has been made, in most cases, to present all the derivations from a given root.
